The five-level NorthStar series engages students by seamlessly integrating immersive printed and online content and enabling them to achieve their academic and personal goals to meet the challenges of the 21st century. Reading and writing directions are designed to challenge students to move beyond the basic understanding of higher-level analysis. Five Levels Two Directions: Listening & Talking, Reading and Writing Series Editors: Francis Boyd and Carl Numrich GSE: 34 - 76 Looking for free course resources? Current and thought-provoking selections and reads from different contrasting authentic genres intellectually stimulate students. Authentic content engages students, connects them to the use of language outside the classroom, and promotes critical thinking and personal expression. Explicit language skills are reinforced and practiced using patterns from the selection of a listening unit, while pronunciation and choice of speaking skills expose students to the sounds and patterns of English to prepare them to express their ideas at a higher level. The apparent development of language skills in each unit provides students with systematic and repeated exposure to language forms and structures in different contexts. Short presentations and targeted practice in print and online build students' language skills. Productive vocabulary and grammar structures are targeted, reviewed, practiced, and expanded for the final speaking task. Writing sections integrates the concepts, vocabulary and grammar of the unit leading students through the writing process. Students learn to revise techniques that help them move towards consistency and unity in their writing. Group projects inspire students to consult further and prepare students to engage in real activities. The projects include internet research that helps students build digital literacy skills. A variety of online assessments related to teachers to individualise learning and track students' progress. MyEnglishLab teacher resources include scope and consistency, student's digital book, achievement tests, classroom audiocrises, video activities, videoscripts, teacher manual, response keys, and download test.
